Not Nicotine, but Pyridines.
It is doubtful whether any nicotine ever reaches the mouth of the smoker except that present in the moistened tobacco which is in contact with the lips. The smoke products of tobacco do not contain any important quantity of nicotine, the chief toxic bodies being related to that interesting series of organic bases known to chemists as pyridines.—Lancet.

He's a Cuckoo.
This story was told recently at a smoker given by the alumni of the University of Michigan at Chicago.
"A young man and his wife, not long married," said the relator of the incident, "lived down on the South Side, where they had a pretty little two-story brick. One of their wedding presents was a large clock which told the hours and the half hours by means of the cuckoo's cry instead of by the usual chiming or the sounding of a bell.
One night the college fraternity of which the man was a member gave a banquet, and it was accordingly late when he arrived at the front door of his home. He thought that discretion was the better part of valor, so that when he got inside he began to remove his shoes before going up the stairs.
Unfortunately he was not very happy in his execution of this act, for one of the shoes slipped and made a noise that could be heard all over the house.
A moment later his wife's voice came from the head of the stairway.
"Is that you, Charles?"
"Yes, dear."
"What time is it, Charles?"
"About 12."
"And then," said Charles in telling the incident afterward, "that blamed clock began to cry out. But it cc-ood only three times, and I had to stand there like a fool and cuckoo the other nine!"—Detroit Free Press.

Consumption.
Pulmonary tuberculosis is not a contagious, but only a communicable disease. The contact per se of the consumptive individual does not convey the disease. It is now well known that it is mainly the tuberculosis expectora-tion, which, when dried and pulverized to dust, constitutes the main danger of infection. The means to prevent infection from tuberculosis expectoration or saliva—expectorating only in proper vessels, spittoons and pocket flasks, proper use of handkerchiefs during coughing, etc.—are now also universally taught.

It is absolutely demonstrated that a tuberculosis patient, if he takes proper care of his expectoration, does not constitute any danger to his fellow men.
In sanatoria and hospitals exclusively devoted to the care of consumptives it is of the rarest occurrence for an attendant to contract the disease, the hygienic precautions being so thorough. It may indeed be said that in these houses for consumptives one is less liable to contract consumption than outside of them.—Dr. S. A. Knopf in Forum.

A Conjurer at Colombo.
Our conjurer's appearance placed him at once above the suspicion of concealing anything up his sleeve, for sleeve he had none. His dress was a scent white drapery which began at the shoulders and ended at the knees, leaving both arms and legs uncovered.
Placing himself on the deck directly in front of us, with his boy assistants a little way off on either side, he began operations.

First he spread on the deck a small cotton pocket handkerchief. Thereon, in the form of a small hillock, he put two handfuls of loose friable earth. In which he planted the mango seed. This accomplished, he dispatched a boy with a flat tin for water. In the meantime taking a hooded snake from a shallow basket and waving it—the while it hissed angrily and enlarged its neck—over the little mound of soil, as he did so chanting on a strange pipe.
The water fetched, he sprinkled a few drops on the earth, then covered the heap with a small square of fringed turban cloth.

After again repeating his incantations he lifted the top covering and revealed a tiny green shoot, not unlike the first appearance of a bean above the ground.—Blackwood.

The Jews in Frankfurt.
George Brandes thus describes the position of the Jews in Frankfurt, Germany, at the beginning of the nineteenth century: "All Jews were forced to live in the narrow, miserable, overcrowded Judengasse (Jew street), their sole abode since the year 1462. At the beginning of night all the inhabitants of the ghetto were locked in. They were not allowed to use the sidewalk while walking in the street in the daytime, but had to take the middle of the street. They had to remove their hats before every passerby, who would call out, 'Jew, make your bow!'"

"To prevent too large an increase not more than 14 couples were permitted to marry in any one year. On every festivity occasion they were driven into the ghetto. On Sunday the gates were locked regularly at 4 o'clock, and no one was allowed to pass by the guard at the gate except when on an errand with a prescription to the drug store or for the purpose of mailing a letter.
One general rule was 'No Jew allowed on a green spot.'" Napoleon abolished this state of affairs in 1810, but it was restored after his downfall.

A Tonic Needless.
Mrs. Hohmbodde—John, dear, while you're down town I wish you'd just call and pay the milliner—$17 the bill is but if you give her $10—

Mr. Hohmbodde—I'd rather settle it in full.

Mrs. Hohmbodde—Well, but I want you to bring me six yards of that lovely stuff from Matchem's—I'll get you the pattern—and that will take the other $7. Then I'll just make a memorandum of the trimmings, that will be about $3 more, and if you love me you know the kind of gloves I want. You've bought them often enough. Now, dear boy, you won't forget?

Mr. Hohmbodde—No, I'll remember; and, by the way, I'll take my tonic bottle along and get it renewed. I've felt quite run down of late.

Mrs. Hohmbodde—Your tonic? Why, that costs $1.50! It seems just like throwing money in the street to pay for medicine. Don't you think you could get along without it?—Judge.
